

U. Miami Non-Undergraduate Survey: Have You Ever Heard the Term “Digital Humanities”?

Dieyun Song, Alexandria Morgan, Francesca Battista

In this report, we examined non-undergraduate results for questions Q46 and Q46A which asked respondents whether they have heard the term “Digital Humanities,” and in what context.

I. Visualizations and Statistics

Q46: Have you ever heard the tem “digital humanities”?

Total Respondents: 197 out of 236

Yes: 22%

No: 61%

No Answer: 17%

Q46: Have you ever heard the tem “Digital Humanities”?

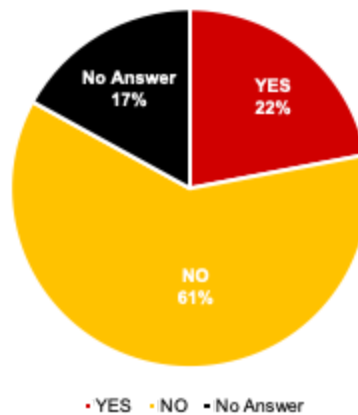

Fig. 1: Q46 results

Q46A - If so, in what context?

Total Respondents: 47 out of 52

Total	Description
33	Academia
5	Friends
2	Library
2	Social Media
1	Work
4	Other <sup>1</sup>

Word cloud of Q46A responses using Voyant (removing phrase "digital humanities")

II. Discursive Response

Excluding “no answers,” 27% of non-undergraduate respondents said that they have heard of “digital humanities,” which is significantly higher than the 11% of undergraduates who indicated the same. This implies that access and exposure to DH is still largely relegated to graduate and professional spaces, rather than disseminated more widely in the academy.

<sup>1</sup> One respondent chose to define DH instead, stating that “It's an ever-changing field. It's often full of jargon and difficult to understand--and it can seemingly take any form of research that's loosely related to humanities and technology of any kind.”